

January 19, 2018

Strong economy emboldens ECB hawks

Last week, markets were somewhat rattled by the release of the minutes of the ECB's December monetary policy meeting. The document conveyed a more hawkish tone than had been perceived at President Mario Draghi's press conference immediately after the meeting.

On December 14th the ECB upheld its ultra-easy policy stance, stating that rates would be kept low for an extended period and that, if necessary, more stimulus would be provided beyond September 2018 – the date that its €30-billion-per-month bond-buying program is scheduled to run until.

However, from the minutes, it was evident that there is a growing appetite amongst committee members for the bank to revise its policy message "early" in 2018, especially guidance that links the bank's asset purchase program to inflation. Against a backdrop of stellar growth, it is now expected that the ECB will tweak its policy message between March and June in order to begin preparing markets for the day when the umbilical cord of central bank support is cut.

Currently, the ECB has left the door open on its asset purchase program, stating that it could persist beyond September 2018 if necessary and only after it was stopped, would rate hiking begin. Following the publication of the minutes, the conviction that the ECB will stop buying bonds in September rose. There was re-pricing across the money market curve as investors recalibrated expectations regarding rate hikes. Markets now expect the first ECB rate hike since 2011 to take place before March 2019 (by 15 basis points (bp)), followed by another 25bp hike by the second half of 2019, with a normalization of the deposit facility rate to 0% taking place before the end of 2019.

However, upon detecting a more hawkish disposition, currency traders drove the euro to a three-year high against the dollar. As we discussed in a previous article, a strong euro could be detrimental to Europe's recovery and may even scupper the ECB's plans to wean the economy off of its support in the medium term. A firmer currency tends to dampen inflation by making exports more expensive and imports cheaper. Data released on Wednesday confirmed that inflation in the euro-area remained subdued in December at 1.4% (annualized) – still quite far off the ECB's 2% target.

Speaking to the Italian newspaper, La Repubblica - with regards to the euro's appreciation - Vítor Constâncio, ECB vice-president said he was "concerned about sudden movements which don't reflect changes in fundamentals." The ECB's Ewald Nowotny also said that recent euro strength against the dollar is "not helpful".

Indeed, the euro is now roughly 4.5% above the level which was factored into the ECB's December forecast and the currency's rapid appreciation will need to be thoroughly assessed before further revisions are made to forward guidance.

Whilst a stronger euro may buy some time for bond markets, easy monetary policy must come to an end sooner or later. In the meantime, bond markets will continue to be highly sensitive to ECB commentary signaling an end to ultra-low interest rates and the asset purchase program which keeps yields suppressed (and prices artificially high) across the sovereign and corporate bond universes.

Our asset allocation is formulated to try and provide a degree of insulation against rising bond yields. Our tactical allocation holds only a nuanced selection of investment grade corporate bonds and maintains underweight positions in both European sovereign bonds and European high-yield bonds, giving preference to emerging market debt.

In terms of sovereign bonds, yields are already starting to head north - expectations are for the Bund to reach 0.80% by the end of the year. Yields are also set to rise in the corporate bond market once the ECB ends its buying spree which has capped borrowing costs for companies but led to a scarcity in quality debt.

As discussed in a previous publication, scarcity and the hunt for yield has pushed investors towards the riskier end of the debt spectrum into the high-yield (junk) bond market. These instruments, though not directly purchased by the ECB, could be one of the hardest hit asset classes after the central bank's support is withdrawn, compelling investors to re-price risk and scurry back up the quality curve. For this reason, investors wishing to add an element of risk to portfolios would do well to consider European equities which are still taking sap from the continent's solid economic growth.

Disclaimer

All financial data and/or economic information released by this Publication (the "Publication"); (the "Data" or the "Financial data and/or economic information"), are provided for information purposes only, without warranty of any kind, including without limitation the warranties of merchantability, fitness for a particular purpose or warranties and non-infringement of any patent, intellectual property or proprietary rights of any party, and are not intended for trading purposes. Banque Internationale à Luxembourg SA (the "Bank") does not guarantee expressly or impliedly, the sequence, accuracy, adequacy, legality, completeness, reliability, usefulness or timeliness of any Data. All Financial data and/or economic information provided may be delayed or may contain errors or be incomplete. This disclaimer applies to both isolated and aggregate uses of the Data. All Data is provided on an "as is" basis. None of the Financial data and/or economic information contained on this Publication constitutes a solicitation, offer, opinion, or recommendation, a guarantee of results, nor a solicitation by the Bank of an offer to buy or sell any security, products and services mentioned into it or to make investments. Moreover, none of the Financial data and/or economic information contained on this Publication provides legal, tax accounting, financial or investment advice or services regarding the profitability or suitability of any security or investment. This Publication has not been prepared with the aim to take an investor's particular investment objectives, financial position or needs into account. It is up to the investor himself to consider whether the Data contained herein this Publication is appropriate to his needs, financial position and objectives or to seek professional independent advice before making an investment decision based upon the Data. No investment decision whatsoever may result from solely reading this document. In order to read and understand the Financial data and/or economic information included in this document, you will need to have knowledge and experience of financial markets. If this is not the case, please contact your relationship manager. This Publication is prepared by the Bank and is based on data available to the public and upon information from sources believed to be reliable and accurate, taken from stock exchanges and third parties. The Bank, including its parent, - subsidiary or affiliate entities, agents, directors, officers, employees, representatives or suppliers, shall not, directly or indirectly, be liable, in any way, for any: inaccuracies or errors in or omissions from the Financial data and/or economic information, including but not limited to financial data regardless of the cause of such or for any investment decision made, action taken, or action not taken of whatever nature in reliance upon any Data provided herein, nor for any loss or damage, direct or indirect, special or consequential, arising from any use of this Publication or of its content. This Publication is only valid at the moment of its editing, unless otherwise specified. All Financial data and/or economic information contained herein can also quickly become out-of-date. All Data is subject to change without notice and may not be incorporated in any new version of this Publication. The Bank has no obligation to update this Publication upon the availability of new data, the occurrence of new events and/or other evolutions. Before making an investment decision, the investor must read carefully the terms and conditions of the documentation relating to the specific products or services. Past performance is no guarantee of future performance. Products or services described in this Publication may not be available in all countries and may be subject to restrictions in some persons or in some countries. No part of this Publication may be reproduced, distributed, modified, linked to or used for any public or commercial purpose without the prior written consent of the Bank. In any case, all Financial data and/or economic information provided on this Publication are not intended for use by, or distribution to, any person or entity in any jurisdiction or country where such use or distribution would be contrary to law and/or regulation. If you have obtained this Publication from a source other than the Bank website, be aware that electronic documentation can be altered subsequent to original distribution.

As economic conditions are subject to change, the information and opinions presented in this outlook are current only as of the date indicated in the matrix or the publication date. This publication is based on data available to the public and upon information that is considered as reliable. Even if particular attention has been paid to its content, no guarantee, warranty or representation is given to the accuracy or completeness thereof. Banque Internationale à Luxembourg cannot be held liable or responsible with respect to the information expressed herein. This document has been prepared only for information purposes and does not constitute an offer or invitation to make investments. It is up to investors themselves to consider whether the information contained herein is appropriate to their needs and objectives or to seek advice before making an investment decision based upon this information. Banque Internationale à Luxembourg accepts no liability whatsoever for any investment decisions of whatever nature by the user of this publication, which are in any way based on this publication, nor for any loss or damage arising from any use of this publication or its content. This publication, prepared by Banque Internationale à Luxembourg (BIL), may not be copied or duplicated in any form whatsoever or redistributed without the prior written consent of BIL 69, route d'Esch | L-2953 Luxembourg | RCS Luxembourg B-6307 | Tel. +352 4590 6699 | www.bil.com.